THE Fiji Institute of Chartered Accountants (FICA) hope that discussions during their 2023 Congress next week will enlighten delegates on the relevant topics.

FICA president Tarlochan Singh said the congress was a platform to ensure that delegates gathered the new trends, market developments and update them on what was happening around the globe.

"We hope that the discussions will help in the policy decision-making by government. We also hope that some of the ideas will be picked up by our business and government committee and will be part of the continuous discussions between the FICA and government agencies, including the Ministry of Finance and the Fiji Revenue and Customs Service, to name a few," he said.

With most of the speakers at the congress coming from overseas, Mr Singh is urging delegates to absorb the ideas and see how those ideas/thoughts could be used in the local businesses, organisations and departments.

"For delegates this is a great opportunity to network, share ideas and make new friends, potential business clients and catch up with old friends and colleagues.

"For the FICA members — the annual general meeting will also be held on Friday (June 23) afternoon to discuss the affairs of the FICA."

He reiterated that the congress was a great avenue for all to meet and develop partnerships.

"I personally hope all the delegates will have two great days of learning and networking at the Congress.

"For all those companies/organisations that have allowed your employees to attend thank you.

"A big thanks to the Congress sponsors – we greatly appreciate their assistance," he said.

Mr Singh said without the support of the sponsors it would have been difficult and an enormous task to organise such an event.

"The funds raised assist in getting the logistics organised and more importantly getting the great line up of speakers. We are looking forward to their continued support and hope that they will return for the next Congress in 2024.

"I hope this Congress will enable the sponsors to see what all FICA has been doing and will continue to do in building Fiji's economy."

Meanwhile the initial target for the institute was for 400 delegates but Mr Singh said they were now expecting more than 430 delegates.

The FICA 2023 Congress will be held from June 23-24 at the Shangri-La Yanuca Island, Fiji in Nadroga.
